A Carpet-Bagger's Views.

Mr. William Patt Keilogg, the carpet-bag Governor of Louisiana, has just returned to New York from a visit to Washington, and in an interview with a reporter for the New York Herald gives his views on Southern affairs as

He says that in both Louisiana and South Carolina the negro vote is so large that no doubt of the result can be entertained if the whites do not end avor to hinder a free exercise of suffrage; and if proper precautions are taken there is reason to believe that voters will not be impeded in the performance of their duty. In Florida and North Carolina, too, the Governor thinks there is still a fair chance for the republicans to succeed, and it is possible that these States will be gained for the party that wins the earliest advantages in the campaign. At the present moment the people are wavering, and they are very accessible to that influence which the prestige of early success is calculated to give. The October elections will greatly tend to decide what ticket these States will indorse, and it is probable that many other States, such as New Jersey, will be gained in the same way. It is generally admitted that in Presidential elections the weight of the larger and more populous States' example acts upon the smaller ones, and the vote in Ohio will be apt to exert a very strong influence in this campaign. In reference to the probability of any disturbance occurring in Louisiana during the election Governor Kellogg said that he did not apprehend any provided the chances of Hayes and Wheeler seemed very favorable, as the whites would hesitate in such a case to attempt any outrage or to coerce their colored neighbors in the disposition of their votes. But if Tilden seemed likely to win there was reason to believe that an effort would be made in some parishes to gain a democratic majority at any cost, and some of the white liners would not shrink from any injustice that might further their in crests if they felt that they could gain immunity from punishment, as they no doubt would if the nawhere there is a majority of 8,000 or 10,000 across cutside of a good many hard working republican whites very little doubt might be entertained of that party's success, did there not exist so perfect an organization among the whites and so fixed a determination to keep the negro out of office, and, if possible, to deprive him of his suffragan privileges. The extremes to which this feeling of race animosity could be carried had more than once been demoustrated, and although of late any outward manitestation of it had been suppressed, there was in the past or not was something which the tuture alone could determine; but the success of the republican ticket in other States in Oc tober would go far to make the election peaceable in Louisiana. The statement frequently heard nowadays that the colored vote in the South is likely to be largely democratic was ridiculed by the Governor. He thought such an idea preposterous. He said that if allowed to vote at all the negroes will certainly not vote for the party which has not nominated for a State or local office a single member of their race, and which has always declined to recognize their right to use their own judgment at Some of the candidates put forward for office are men who have persistently opposed the negro, who have voted against the fourteenth little doubt that it existed intensely and perhaps as widely spread as ever. Whether there would be any such public exhibition of this teeling in the coming election as there had been constitutional amendment, and who are well known as leading white liners. It is not likely that any hustings elequence is going to be an ad quote apology for the massacre and for all the outrages perpetrated in the State. The begroes now as in the past, are devoted to the republican party, and they cannot be cajol d very readily into giving over their aliegiance to it. In States like Mississippi and Texas, where there is so much terrorism wielded by the white democrats, and where the colored people are prevented voting if they seem todisposed to act in political accord with the waites, some people fancy that a large mass of the negroes vote the democratic ticket. But if they do it is more through fear than inclination. In short, there is every reason to mark a district with a large negro population as essensially republican, and the result will generaly go to prove the correctness of such a cal-

The Governor then went on to say that the don crats had some good men on the State taket, and of these the candidate for Governor was doubless the best. The campaign would and able be spirited, and a strong effort would be in de to elect him. But only a little attenthe was paid to the State contest in comparison with that given to the national issue. On that all the attention of the Southern States as fix d, and they were willing to sacrifice loca interests so long as they could gain some thing for the national party. In fact, in such States as Louisina and South Carolina they worked to the democratic administration if it shull get into power to override the State covernment and pullify the effect of a successla republican State ticket. The South was cathering all its energies to bear upon this campaign. A great effort would be made at this critical moment to regain power, and the Southern democracy hoped that, with the aid of that of the North, they would be able to secure first a democratic administration, and then, with their large representation in both houses, they would succeed in getting the upper hand in the nation. The Governor said there is no new rebellion to be apprehended; there need be no auxiety entertained about the South's ever seceding and forming a distinct conlederacy. The dream of a separate rule had been dissipated, and in the embers of rebellion which went out parter the tread of the Union armies the idea of establishing a distinct gov etument and a forming a distinct people nad dissoved. The South does not want to break the Union now. It aspires to control the whole of it; and with a democratic administration this s not as impossible as it might seem. In the North there are many States like New York, which the republicans and democra's are

SLENA.GAZETTE & VIRGINIA ADVERTISER | Now, with such a condition, under a demoeratte administration, the Southh would be able to control the government and then the people of the North would awaken to the mis-toke they had made. Now they have ports in the North lit up by light houses, dotted with buoys and with every provision to make them safe and commodicus. Railroads intersect the country in every conceivable direction, supplying a channel for trade and ready markets to which industry may send its products. Every thing that may serve to develop the resources of the laud and coried the people has been attended to. Lot a democratic President be in the White House, with a Southern Senate in the Capitol and a large Southern representation in the other House, and the lights in the Northern harbors will gradually go out, and the appropriations for railroads and improvements will diminish, and the encouragement industry has received from the government will wax cooler there; but in the South cities will grow, railreads will be laid and the nation's Treasury will be drained to build up certain of the Southern States. Of course Mr. Tilden may personally favor the North, but if the South gets the upper hand he will not be able to divert them from their purpose. It is a purpose they have leng been pursuing, and the Southern democracy went to St. Louis, not devoted to Mr. Tilden in any particular way, but willing to accept him or any other man who would bring a fair Northern vote to combine with theirs. Gov. Kellogg then went onto speak of the State of Louisiana, and said that even the democrats must admit that the republican administration had been of advantage to it. Since he took the Gubernatorial chair taxes had been reduced one third and the current expenses of the State government lessened one half. Louisiana State is republican, New Orleans democratic. The State is solvent, the city is bankrupt. The State pays every cent of its debt at the proper time, the city is utterly unable to meet the claims

In the city the Governor said there will be no republican candidate nominated, but they will support the best men for city offices, which one or other of the democratic factions may put forward, and in so doing endeavor to secure some advantages for the State or national
